Connecting with Community Through Art at Gather Glass

The experience had at Gather is meant to inspire their visitors just as much as their beautiful hand blown glass creations do. Connecting with community through art by sharing their passion for the craft of glassblowing is at the core of what they do. It is also the inspiration for their name. Master glassblower Benjamin Giguere invites you to their studio/gallery to attend a glassblowing class and make your own unique glass creation. Learn how to craft an ornament, drinking glass or paperweight in one of their group classes. They can also be a destination for friend or family gatherings, or for workplace team building parties.

If you're looking for an especially unique gift, their custom glass pieces put a creative spin on the next wedding, anniversary or birthday present. They also encourage you to stop in and watch the process of your glass being made. More live glassblowing at the studio can be enjoyed during Gallery Night, held every third Thursday of the month. They can be seen during WaterFire as well, where they host live glassblowing at their mobile unit. Want to make your next special occasion an inspiring one? Inquire about their mobile glass blowing unit for your next private event. 521 Atwells Avenue, GatherGlass.com.
